

Working Group 5 – Scientists: Literature review deliverables

The WG5 – SCIENTIST focuses on ensuring efficient researchers' engagement in outreach and in evolution in particular. The WG aims to provide a sound understanding of current practices involving researchers' engagement in scientific outreach, to increase awareness about the benefits for both researchers and the general public from their interactions and to promote efficient interactions. Its main tasks:

1.To undertake a systematic review of the ways in which researchers can be involved in outreach and develop a set of good practices that improve science and evolution literacy; 2.Development of standardized tools to enhance researcher engagement in outreach; 3.Develop material to enhance researcher engagement in outreach (best practice guide) e 4.Organize a joint meeting with existing initiatives on citizen science to explore citizen-science projects with an evolutionary focus.

One of its tasks is to undertake a systematic review of the ways in which researchers can be involved in outreach and develop a set of good practices that improve science and evolution literacy.

Within this task there are three deliverables based on the literature review and that are complementary. The first one presents the methodological design, the second one focuses on scientists' motivations, about science communication regardless of their scientific area and the third one refers specifically to the challenges of science communication in the field of evolution.
